

The U.S. Copyright Office states that copyright, a form of intellectual property law, protects original works of authorship including literary, dramatic, musical, and artistic works, such as poetry, novels, movies, songs, computer software, and architecture. Copyright does not protect facts, ideas, systems, or methods of operation, although it may protect the way these things are expressed.

The copyright registration of your book is publicly available information and is legally binding. Even if you have selected Pseudonymous in the next sections, if the your legal name is given, it will be made part of the online public records produced by the Copyright Office and will be accessible via the Internet. A P.O. Box number can be used for the claimant address for further anonymity or you can have your registration form sent to us using the FriesenPress address in the claimant information and we will forward the form to you. This information cannot be removed later from those public records.

This form has been submitted to your Publishing Specialist.
